DVD Production

Brief Overview

What makes DVDs special is that the DVD format provides many more horizontal lines of resolution. This is a significant improvement over horizontal lines of resolution of standard VHS. There is also an additional ability to add interactive menus. You can not only instantly jump to any portion of the digital movie, but you can also include slide shows. Authoring software makes your custom DVDs extraordinary. Authoring is the process by which you link all the clips, graphics and elements of your DVD together. Your audience can immediately access that portion most important to them. This is a terrific advantage in education and demonstrations.

Making Your DVD

We import the media to be used, then set up the opening menu. Then we link each button with its "target". The target can be a movie clip, a chapter point within a movie, a graphic, slide show or another menu. When the Authoring is complete, we burn a master disk. You may test a copy of the master on your DVD player or computer. Depending on your needs you may then produce the quantities appropriate for you.
